Arafat Reported To Set Attacks on American Targets

By Elaine Sciolino

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - The United States has received reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization leader, Yasser Arafat, approved terrorist actions against U.S. tar-gets in retaliation for the assassination of his top aide, a senior State Department official said Tuesday. The official, Richard W. Murphy, ussistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, also said that the United States had sent messages through several Arab governments warning Mr. Arafat not to attack U.S. personnel or installations abroad as a reprisal for the assassination of a top aide, Khalil al-Wazir.

Moderate Leftist Is Seen as Key to Centrist Strategy

PARIS - President François Mitterrand appointed Michel Ro-card, a Socialist who is also a popular national politician, to be the new prime minister, replacing Jac-ques Chirac, whn resigned earlier Tuesday.

Mr. Rocard, 57, is known as a pragmatist whose selection will appeal to French centrists.

By choosing him, Mr. Mitterrand, who was re-elected Sunday to a second seven-year term, is apparently seeking to persuade some moderate conservatives to switch out of opposition and join a centerleft coalinon with broad, durable support in the country. Mr. Rocard is expected to form a government, including some prominent non-Socialist figures, that can hope to obtain a working majority in Parliament, thus avoiding early legislative elections. The present Parliament, elected in March 1986, bas a conservative majority.

NEW YORK --- About 10 years ago, in the early morning bours after a coronary bypass operation, California postal worker suffered a suda retired den loss of blood to his brain. Although be survived with most of his faculties intact, the patient, known in the annals of neurology as R.B., lost his ability to form memories.

When R.B. died in 1983, his last half decade an amnesiac blur, scientists at the Veterans Administration Medical Center and the Salk Institute in La Jolla, California, were allowed to study his brain. R.B.'s amnesia had not been caused by massive or even moderate brain damage, they discovered, but by a small, well-defined lesion in the hippocampus, a part of the temporal lobe that is believed to be involved in storing memories.

The brain cells that had been damaged are now known to be rich in an unusual molecule called the NMDA receptor, after the chemical, N-methyl Daspartate, that is used to detect it.

Since 1986, scientists have been accumulating evidence that this receptor is a key component in the brain's memory circuits, turning on the bio-chemical reactions that lead to the encoding of memories.

It appears to be the gatekeeper that allows calcium to flow into brain cells, strengthening the network of neuronal connections that are believed to constitute memory.

"It's one of the hottest theories in the neurosciences," said Carl W. Cotman, a neurobiologist at the University of California at Irvine who has been studying the receptor. "It's a beautiful little switch.

In the last two years, the evidence that the NMDA receptor is crinical to learning bas become so compelling that scientists with competing theories of how the brain stores information are finding something in common. However divergent the details of the mechanisms they propose, suddenly they are revising them to include this kind of receptor.

The discovery of the receptor's properties has belped reawaken interest in the whole field of learning and memory, holding out the possibility that higher brain functions such as these might nnly in memory formation but in creating circuitry in the infant brain.

Paradoxically, they may also trigger a self-de-struct mechanism. When overstimulated by the wildfire electrical activity caused by epileptic seizures or blood loss to the brain, the receptors apparently unleash enzymes that destroy neurons.

Pharmaceutical companies are studying drugs that temporarily block the receptors, hoping they can prevent brain damage.

finally be explained through binlogy.

"It's happening really quickly," said Charles F. Stevens of Yale University, who is researching the physinlogy of the molecule. "A few years ago no one paid any attention to NMDA receptors."

Niger Program Aims to Shield an Animal and Save a Tribe

By James Brooke New York Times Service

NIAMEY, Niger - Here, along the edge of the Sahara, conservationists have joined forces with development groups to help a struggling African tribe and protect an endangered animal species at the same time.

The people are the Tuareg, nomadic herdsmen whose way of life has oearly been destroyed by political and economic changes, drought and environmental damage

The endangered animal is the addax, an antelope with long and twisted horns that sleeps during the day and forages at night. The addax has adapted so well to conditions in the Sahara that scientists believe it can live a full life span without ever drinking water.

The Tuareg still occasionally hunt the addax, but photos and clocking the addax against their speedometers. This, too, can disrupt or even kill the animal, which normally sleeps during the day and lacks a population has dwindled to about 50 today. Uotil recently, it seemed destined to share the fate of the scimitar-homed oryx, an antelope now extinct in this sub-Saharan nation. But, instead of launching a "Save the Addax" cam-paign, the government and the Swiss-based Worldwide Fund for Nature, formerly the World Wildlife Fund, decided to tackle the problem as a whole.

A similar approach proved successful in the small central African nation of Rwanda, where poaching of mountain gorillas dropped sharply in the early 1980s as the result of increased park patrols and new job opportunities in surrounding communities.

"It is the only way to go in the Third World," said more often they guide the thousands of tourists who John Newby, the representative in Niamey of the speed across the desert in all-terrain vehicles, snapping nature fund and an organizer of the new program. > Although the region rarely gets more than two inches (five centimeters) of rain a year, rock pools provide water for a variety of animals such as cheetahs, ostriches, barbary sheep, baboons and gazelles. There are also drought-resistant varieties of olives, figs, tamarinds, wild sorghum and other plants,

Ancient engravings in the mountain rocks depict the rhinoceros, elephant, lion and buffalo, animals that once lived here. Today, sites dating back 40,000 years are routinely pillaged by tourists seeking souvenirs. The desert side of the reserve is a waterless landscape of dunes and sand walls sculpted in curving shapes by Saharan winds.

Niger's government has set aside a core area, onesixth of the park, as a sanctuary for the addax. It will be closed to visitors.

Development efforts are to be concentrated on the surrouoding area. The tourist gateway to the park will development aid," he said.

The guides are to enforce park rules - no hunting, cutting of vegetation or looting of archaeological sites.

Park officials envision building a small hotel and forming a cooperative for the sale of crafts made from local marble.

Most of the region's 7,000 Tuaregs will not benefit directly from tourism, so the nature fund plans to eolist development groups to teach techniques for conserving wood, water and pasture land.

At present, 90 percent of the park's budget comes from the Swiss government, 8 percent from the nature fund and 2 percent from another private group, Band Aid

By entwining nature conservation with human de-velopment, Mr. Newby hopes to tap the large amount of development money available in Africa.

Beirut Calmer in Uneasy Cease-Fire

BEIRUT (NYT) - There was a lull Taesday in fighting between Moslem Shiite groups in Bernt's densely populated southern subarbs after an uneasy cease-fue was arranged by Iranian and Syrian mediators. But the calm dissolved several times as firing broke out between the pro-Syrian Amal militia and the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God. The rocket and machine-gun exchanges, however, were not as bad as the previous fighting. There were no immediate reports of new casualties.

The police said as many as 140 people had been killed and 500 wounded since the battles for control of the subarbs broke out Friday. Committees of Syrian military officers, Iranian officials and represen-

As he did in April, Mr. Okuno played down Japanese wartime aggression, first in parliamentary de-bate Monday and then while talking with Japanese reporters Tuesday.

Discussing Japan's military at-tacks against China in the 1930s, Mr. Okuno, who is director-general of the National Land Agency, told the reporters: "I don't want to describe it as an aggressive war because both many Japanese and Chinese were killed."

. On Monday, answering ques-oons in the Diet, he said Japan "had oo intention" of invading China. In fact, Japanese troops overran much of eastern China, killing millions of people in the process.

After World War II, an Allied tribunal in Tokyo coovicted Japanese leaders of war crimes and sentenced seven of them to death, including former Prime Minister Hideki Tojo.

The verdicts, Mr. Okuno said South Korea issued formal protests Monday, were a case of "victors' punishment oo the losers."

He insisted, however, that he wished "to establish friendly Japan-China relations" and added, "1 have never spoken ill of China."

Mr. Okuno's insistence on repeating comments that China has labeled offensive put Mr. Takeshita in a bind, especially since the prime minister hopes to visit Beijing this summer.

Truckers Extend Channel Blockade

DUNKIRK, France (Reuters) - Truck drivers extended a blockade of Channel ports to Dunkirk and Ostend, Belgium, on Tuesday in protest of a three-month strike by British scamen, officials said. Hundreds of truck drivers have already blocked ferry berths at Dover and Calais over the British stoppage, which has severely disrupted Channel freight traffic. Truck crews in Ostend blocked ferries for six hours before agreeing to end their protest after talks with the Belgian ferry operator RMT.

A company spokesman said sailings had resumed for cars, buses and foot passengers. "Everything is running normally," the Belgian opera-tions director, Jean Carlier, said by telephone from Ostend. The trucks remained stranded at the port, however, because striking British seament were refusing to let freight off vessels arriving in Dover, he said. Finance Minister Emilio Colombo of Italy and union leaders negotiated an end Tuesday to a long pay dispute during which custom officials refused to work overtime, backing up freight at border points. Flying Opens Doors

To Wilds of Alaska Alaska has two classes of people, Hal Spencer writes in The New York Times from Anchorage: those who fly and those who do not. "For those who do not fly, Alaska is a place with a limited road system often clogged by snow in the winter and maddeningly slow motor homes in the summer," he says. "It is a place of shoulder-to-shoulder salmon fishing on stretches of river reachable by vehicles."

But for those who do fly, Alaska lives up to its reputation, as "the wild, unspoiled land of bears, baid cagles and soli-tude." The Federal Aviation Administration says Alaska has 9,600 airplanes and almost 11,000 licensed pilots among its 530,000 inhabitants, eight times as many pilots and 15 times as many planes per person as the

France Is Centrist

For the Status Quo

- 48° 4

François Mitterrand's triumphant reelection as president of France was a vote for a very competently managed status quo. It is a measure of the transformation of French politics in the 1980s that the Socialists have become the party of continuity. Now it is the Socialists who firmly command most of the center, and it is the right that is disorganized and fragmented - precisely. the reverse of their positions as recently as the middle 1970s. That reversal is owed largely to Mr. Mitterrand, who has shown himself to be a consummate tactician.

Next be must decide when to hold a parliamentary election. He lost the last one two years ago to the right, which is why his adversary, Jacques Chirac, has been prime minister. The Socialists will presumably want to take advantage of their victory and gain control of the government, as they did after the first Mitterrand election in 1981.

If they should succeed, they are not likely to try to launch another round of Socialist legislation. When they tried that seven years ago the results were capital flight, rising unemployment and a falling franc. The Socialists proved sufficiently flexible and pragmatic to abandon doctrinal experiments and shift rapidly to the centrist policies that earned Mr. Mitterrand the confidence reflected in Sunday's returns.

There have been real costs imposed by the swing away from the original leftist experiments. The unemployment rate in France remains stuck at more than 10 percent, higher than in Margaret Thatcher's Britain. But most French voters, including most of the left, clearly prefer it to the inflation and stagnation which, their experience tells them, would accompany any serious attempt to generate jobs faster.

As prime minister, Mr. Chirac never managed to show that be had as good a sense of direction as the president under whom he served. One example was the spectacular release that he engineered, several days before the election, of the three French hostages held by Iran's friends in Beirut, Most French voters are undoubtedly very glad to have the three back home, but a good many on both right and left were evidently troubled by the magnitude of the coocessions, oot yet fully disclosed, made by Mr. Chirac to Iran.

One highly unfortunate consequence of the failing leadership on the right has been the emergence of Jean-Marie Le Pen's National Front, with its xenophobia and its aroma of fascism. One preoccupation of Mr. Mitterrand's second term will necessarily be to address the blue-collar resentment of foreigners, and of social change in gener-al, which fuels the National Front.

- THE WASHINGTON POST.

A Mandate to Lead

What a difference from François Mitterrand's first presidential victory seven years ago. Then a specter of communism alarmed France's allies; some prominent businessmen left the country. Now, on Monday, the French stock market celebrated the Socialist president's overwhelming re-election by registering a solid gain. The change testifies to Mr. Mitterrand's ideological flexibility and extraordinary political skills. Having used his first term to undermine Communist rivals on the left, he starts his second with a stunning hlow to the Gaullists on his right. At the same time, the election exposed powerful support for an extreme, xenopbobic right. Mr. Mitterrand will now oced to build in the space he has created. His new minority government will have to grope for workable coalitions. France's traditional left-tight divisions played little role in the campaign. The main-stream candidates agreed that the economy to alienated blue-collar workers and the unmust be made more competitive and defense tied more closely to Europe. But as ideology has become less important, party politics has become more so. Mr. Mitterrand has built the Socialist Party into France's largest, giving him his greatest strength. But en route to his triumph be created some obstacles for himself. He promoted the fracture of the right, giving Jean-Marie Le Pen's racist National Front its first foothold in Parliament, by adopting a system of proportional voting. And he revived immigration as a topic in the campaign, enabling Mr. Le Pen to whip up nationalist sentiment and win 14 percent of the vote in the first round on April 24.

Prime Minister Jacques Chirac despertely sought to reclaim lost support from the right. Then at the last minute he bargained for hostages in Lebanon and dispatched commandos to free others in New Caledonia - all with no apparent effect on the election's outcome. Mr. Mitterrand's 54 percent is almost exactly what public opinion polls had been showing for two weeks.

Mr. Mitterrand has transformed French politics with his skillful tactics. But tactics will not contain Mr. Le Pen's extremist employed. Despite the weakness of minority government, be can frame and guide difficult national debates. The challenge now is to use this rare re-election mandate to lead.

Greed is oot a total explanation, oor is the desire to silver-polish and tarnish living reputations. Those are ancient motives. The peculiar lack of central discipline in this administration - the lack of a certain kind of respect for the president - has also played a role. Mr. Regan's particular target is Mrs. Reagan, whom he accuses a) of interfering and b) of doing so according to the wispy dictates of astrology. The latter part of this dictates of astrology. It is a phenomenon almost unknown elsewhere in the world.

Many Europeans tell me they are mystified and troubled by the disclosures of Donald Regan oo astrology in the White House, by Larry Speakes's pride in confecting verbal fluff and passing it off as presidential wisdom, and by the earlier accounts of departed aides who also portraved Mr. Reagan as an empty vessel into which they poured ideas and policies. These disclosures do not alter the view of attentive foreigners about Mr. Reagan's own capabilities, which have oever been rated very highly abroad. What astonishes them is the alacrity with which Mr. Reagan's ex-guardians set about tarnishing his image once they have passed out of the White House portico for the last time.

There seems to be oothing in the American system to restrain them from doing this. No moral or social code that flashes in big letters, "It just isn't dooe," as in West Germany. No permanent attachment to government work that would be destroyed by such indiscretion, as in France. And (thank goodness) oo official secrecy codes that cover the mundane and the embarrassing as well as military secrets, terrorizing civil servants, as in Britain.

On the contrary, the expanding parades into and out of the White House after presidential elections encourage those who have fastened themselves to the coattails of the successful candidate to view their Washington experience primarily as a stepping stone to a big payday or a giant ego-trip. The rewards have grown fat and the penalties, if any, look piddling. Add the fact that the kind of people attracted to government service by Mr. Reagan and his anti-government statice came without much belief in Washington's hrand of professionalism in the first place, and you have the prescription for the disaster that is now occurring,

The world of White House aides as portrayed by Mr. Regan, Mr. Speakes, David Stockman, Michael Deaver et al is a shocking one for people who work in presidencies or chanceries in other nations. For this audience, the surprise does oot spring from the high level of infighting, back-biting and maneuvering for position that goes on

A President Is Worth the Sum of His Appointees

WASHINGTON — After Warren Harding's landslide presidential victory in 1920, one of his political fixers boarded a train in their native Ohio and headed for Washington.

"Yoo ought to be in a position to get pretty moch anything through down there if it's right," a friend told the influence peddler as he saw him off at the station. The fixer replied, with a wink,

"Hell! If it's right, they won't oeed me." It wasn't right, ethically speaking, and they did need him. His arrival, and that of others like him, ushered in the pervasive corruption that charac-terized the rule of Washington by the "Ohio Gang," As the historian Samuel Hopkins Adams described it years ago in "Incredible Era," his book on the Harding scandals: "The Ohio Gang traded in liquor-withdrawal permits, protection to bootleggers, appointments to office, illegal concessions, immunity from prosecution, par-dons, paroles, privileges and general graft." Nothing approaching that scale of corruption, the sheer massive venality of it, has been seen in Washington since. But as the Reagan administration begins to pass into history, it increasingly seems to resemble the Harding period in terms of the ethical climate it has set.

That unflattering portrait has become more sharply focused in recent weeks. It comprises many parts, all related. None will be dissipated re destined to form a major part of change, Governor Michael Dukakis of Massachu-setts. Foremost in the debate is the continuing embarrassment over the stewardship of the Instice Department by Attorney General Edwin Meese. This situation has been permitted to fester until the entire world knows that Mr. Meese's behavior has left the department riven with dissension and in a near-open state of revolt by its most senior, and respected, professional personnel. There is little in American history to march this. Much more than Edwin Meese is at stake. The government's standards for the administration of justice have been indicted.

Then there is the spectacle of the administration's selective approach to wrongdoing. It public-ly proclaims war against drugs but privately caters to big international drug dealers like Manuel Antonio Noriega of Panama because he provides secret training grounds for U.S.-backed contra mercenaries receiving illegal U.S. arms aid.

It talks tough about crime but fights special prosecutors whose jobs were created to watch the watchmen in powerful places and guard the guardians of law enforcement. It crects "a stone wall," in the words of U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard Gesell, between the court and the trial of the Iran-contra defendants.

Reykjavik summit meeting), Mr. Deaver, Mr. Speakes and Mr. Stockman were precisely those officials who were most trusted by Mr. Reagan and by the reporters with whom they dealt to give a lively portrait of the president at work.

It was in the interest of the aides to build up Mr. Reagan then, and the media collaborated. In their careers as ex-aides, scandal sells better, and once again they are skillful in getting the media to help fulfill their agenda.

Mr. Regan shows no sympathy for the argument that he should have delayed his book until President Reagan left office. Did neither he nor his publisher think about at least delaying it for a month so that Mr. Reagan would not have to go to the Moscow summit meeting listening

But as early as the end of the first strike, in Bydgoszcz, local authorities an-nounced that they were considering raising transport fares. Solidarity, after years of decline, has hurched to its feet. Yet the political demands raised by Solidarity, begin-ning with its own reinstatement, have found a limited popular response. Some of Solidarity's past strong-holds have not joined in the protests. and even in the largest center of un- *-rest, Nowa Huta, the loudest cry has been overwhelmingly for more pay. This parlogs situation might have been averted. For a long time, independent political figures, writers and most of Poland'a leading economists have painted a ghastly picture of economic decline. There is a politically acceptable alternative, and Europe needs a lobby to advocate it. One EC official should be called a commissioner for refugees, with a refugee de-fined as "anybody who, owing to events disturbing public order, is compelled to

N EW YORK — By praising the Soviet record on human rights in a recent speech in Chicago, Presi-dent Reagan acknowledged that small but significant progress in this area has taken place under glasnost. It is still not clear whether the progress was primarily the result of American pressure or indeed represents the first signs of an embryonic new society in the Soviet Union. Mikhail Gorbachev's handling of the emerging human rights movement in Russia will answer this question. media and legal protection.

It was a substantial achievement for American diplomacy that the So-viets recognized human rights as a legitimate issue of U.S.-Soviet relations. An office dealing with the subject has been set up in the Soviet Foreign Ministry, and a quasi-official "public" commission has been dis-patched abroad to talk to nongovernment human rights groups.

For the first time, Soviet officials have begun taking questions on human rights abuses — if not from their own people, at least from con-cerned foreigners. Slowly but steadi-ly about half of the political prisoners have been released. The rate of emigradon has gone up. Mr. Reagan is both praised and chided for dropping the description of the Soviet Union as an "evil empire," but the phrase does have a literal truth: The Soviet Union is an empire, and if controlling millions of people and whole nations by force or without their fairly rendered consent is not evil, what is?

But the Soviet Union is also a state with which the United States has good reason to conduct orderly relations. long ago, that was known not only to Poles but was acknowledged by the free nations, a fact accepted as a fact. That is the root, and from it grow almost all of Poland's economic troubles and political uncase, today as in the past four decades. Now it is unfashionable for journalistic and diplomatic specialists to mention it.

And it seems an embarrassment for the United States to talk about it. But neither fashion nor embarrassment can change historic reality and its consequences.

instone reality and its consequences. This is a fair description of any captive rugion: Its economic and political sys-tems, both distasteful to its people, were imposed by another state. Its economic fortunes are shaped by the regular pres-sure or occasional benevolence of that state. Its leadership cannot survive without the approval of the greater power. Year to year and decade to decade, the threat of intervention - economic or military --- varies in immediacy but never vanishes. If the danger of intervention disappeared entirely, the people would dismantle the imposed government and the structure on which it perches, fast.

...... In Poland, the description fits precisely. The Communist economic system, the rule of the Communist Party, the role of police power — all were chosen by the Soviet Union and imposed on the nation Ifter World War II. Only fear of the Soviet Union prevents the system from being wined out by the Polish people. A captive nation, by reasonable definition. The strikes at Nowa Huta and Gdansk come from the failure of the imposed centralized system to create anything but economic chaos. So Poland is captive still, as are the other nations of Eastern and Central Enrope: Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Roma-nia, Hungary, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania.

The last three, the Baltic states, have been annexed and share the fate of the other Soviet "republics." The other countries are still sovereign, allowed national existence within a Communist. structure. They have some flexibility but know that Soviet power stands between them and any attempt to leave the system or even seriously challenge its foundation - Communist Party rule.

All this is hardly a secret. It is simply political reality in the Soviet sphere in Europe. Why is something so elemental mentioned so rarely? One reason is that the captivity of Eastern Europe is taken for granted as everlasting. It seems

All the President's Tattlers

The pieces of the puzzle surrounding The pieces of the puzzle surrounding the most disastrous U.S. presidency in many years are finally falling into place. First we learned not only that Ronald Reagan's spokesman made up "quot-able" quotes so that he would not ap-pear detached and unresponsive, but that the specident did not even valize that the president did not even realize that words were being put into his mouth. Now comes the revelation that the Reagans relied on astrologers' advice schedule important meetings and make "unimportant" decisions. In each case, the source of the revelation is as telling as the information itself -second-rate men Mr. Reagan protected and defended long after they were of any possible usefulness to the administration. It takes a special kind of sleaze to bite the hand that fed and protected for so long. What juicy bits can we look forward to gleaning from Ed Meese's inevitable kiss-and-tell book?

Singapore's Complaint

• 1. e

Regarding "Singapore Calls on U.S. to Pull Out a Diplomat" (May 9):

The Singapore government did not expel E. Mason Hendrickson of the U.S. Embassy for keeping "in touch with a broad spectrum of individuals in order to report accurately" on developments in Singapore, as the article states. Mr. Hendrickson had sought out and gathered together disaffected Singaporeans, and encouraged them by criticizing the

Another reason is that Mikhail Gorba-chev is making changes in the Soviet Union — not yet in political or govern-mental structure, but still important. In the West, the expectation rises that the the West, the expectation rises that the Soviet Union, the captor, will lead the Soviet Union, the captor, will heat the way to reform in the captor nations. Perhaps, but there is no sign that Mos-cow will allow change to the point where Soviet control of the captive nations is threatened. And that is exactly the point to which real reform would lead. The Reagan administration, like merican administrations from Eisen-American administrations from Eisen-hower's on, develops allergies to referring plainly to the captivity of Eastern Europe when big business with Moscow is afoot. This is self-defeating condescension to Moscow, Mr. Gorbachev has seemed more willing to face realities than have his predecessors - or Washington for that matter. Perhaps one day, if he stays in office, he may face the great reality that holding nations in captivity brings not security but unending trouble and risk. Ferhaps. Until then, the United States cannot free the capive nations. It can merely pay their people the courtesy of acknowledging the conditions of their national existence, inconvenient and old-fashioned though it may be to do so. The New York Times.

Mr. Hendrickson had urged lawyers to contest elections against the govern-ment: a senior U.S. State Department official was present and did not contradict what the ambassador said. This was active involvement in Singapore's domestic politics, and clear interference in the internal affairs of Singapore. The Singapore government has pub-lished full details of the evidence against Mr. Hendrickson. The U.S. Embassy statement quoted in your article neither disputes nor refutes any of these facts. The Laws of Nations

Regarding "U.S. Rebuffed in World Court" (Kiosk, April 27): It is interesting to read that "the Unit-ed States has rejected arbitration, saying U.S. law must take precedence over international obligations."

I always understood that international treaties and agreements, duly signed by authorized representatives, would in fact become integral part of the national law after their ratification is decided through the established procedure of parliamentary approval. Are we to understand now that any international act, signed and ratified by the parties concerned, may be repudiated or modified by a subsequent national

Another Black Candidate

I agree with Mayor Raymond Flynn of Boston that the Democratic nominee, presumably Michael Dukakis, should select a black vice presidential candidate ("Boston Mayor Seeks a Black on the Ticket," April 14).

Jesse Jackson has successfully demonstrated Americans' concern both about civil rights issues and the electability of a black in presidential politics. If, however, Mr. Dukakis or the electorate has concerns about Mr. Jackson's lack of experience in government, I have another suggestion: Andrew Young. He has international experience as ambassador to the United Nations under President Jimmy Carter, and in elective office as a congressman and as mayor of Atlanta. Further, as a Southerner he would contribute to a balanced ticket.

JAMES JOHN NICITA. Athens.

It was shocking to read of the attack on Jesse Jackson by Mayor Edward Koch of New York. This oot only paralyzed Mr. Jackson's effort to win the nomination but divided the Democratic electorate. If the Democrats want to see their man in the White House, they Having just returned from one of my frequent visits to Pakistan, this time on business, I came across Linda Bird Francke's opinion column "Between the Pakistani Walls a Veil Falls Over One's Mind" (Meanwhile, March 23). I was shocked by the writer's total misunderstanding of Pakistan and its people.

I run a company that trades in power plants, electronics and other technology. As a European woman I have learned to love Pakistan - its culture, its traditions and above all its people. I feel as if I were and above an its people. I for all it is an coming home whenever I arrive in Islam-abad, Lahore, Peshawar or Baluchistan. Women hold important positions in the country's government — three are ministers and many serve in Parliament. Others are diplomats. And don't forget the opposition leader, Benazir Bhutto. Women run iodustries and businesses as well as bospitals and schools.

I have adopted the traditional clothes worn in Pakistan, which are comfortable and extremely elegant, and sometimes wish I could wear them in Enrope. Pakistan is a balanced, dynamic young Islamic country where human values, respect for women, family life and many other tradinons are preserved. Work in Pakistan is like a holiday for me compared with the stress and aggressivity I find in other countries. K. BOLLMANN. Paris.

Regarding Kathy Manzoor's letter of April 14, I am certain that Pakistan has some fine men, just as our Western countries do, but, like anywhere else in the world, they are as rare as French truffles. Mrs. Manzoor should understand that women who can stand stress and who have adapted successfully to a faster pace greatly enjoy their new chal-lenges and the sense of satisfaction and fulfillment that they achieve.

On Fur Farms and Eskimos

Regarding "Beastly Female Behavior Has a Fur-Wearer Growling," April 8, and letters responding to it:

It should be kept in mind that the fur auctions are dominated by large con-glomerates from the Soviet Union, the Scandinavian countries, Canada and the United States, not by small trappers and backyard farmers, who contribute only 1 percent of the world market. The large fur arms are no more brutal than the farms that produce other animal products.

It would be better to direct our energies to demanding more wholesome methods of caring for all livestock, and to being properly informed about the ways in which all animals are treated in their property unwilling subservience to mankind. P. LAMBERT.

Graduation Is a Party

NN ARBOR, Michigan - "Oh. A say, can you see ... "The anthem begins with the usual whisper, until the ingers feel their individual voices are lost, until almost all are trying the difficult high notes at the end, until the 35,000 or so voices fill the huge stadium that sits like a crater in the side of a hill. A small plane materializes with a streamer. "Congrats, Annette Ferber --Love, Mom and Dad." The sun is so bright it almost sparkles as students, parents and leachers settle in for graduation at the University of Michigan.

The day, last Salurday, seems very special for the pockets of Asian families, many perhaps first-generation Americans, most perhaps marking this rite of democratic passage for the first time. And half the Ph.D.'s are of Asian extraction. Yet many others, representing a second or third generation of college graduates, seem almost to take the day for granted. To them, it is not so much a celebration as a joyful party.

Something seems oot quite right in the panorama. There are very few blacks among the robed students and in the crowd. How odd, how wrong, for a great crowd. How odd, how wrong, for a great public university. True, Michigan is more competitive than, say, Michigan State, and thus less accessible to urban blacks suffering from severe de facto school segregation. But one also won-ders, in light of recent reports, whether many blacks felt so uncomfortable with the university in Ann Arbor that they the university in Ann Arbor that they chose to go somewhere else instead. The speaker is Marshall Shulman, the respected scholar of Soviet affairs and a graduate of this university. His talk is overlong, and 35 minutes into it, loud lapping fills the stands to hurry him on. He lifts his eyes from his unfinished text and says: "To the noise-makers let me say that the last time this happened to me was in the Soviet Union." He sits down, unfinished. All rancor appears forgotten moments later as the crowd applauds his bonorary degree. Jeane Kirkpatrick, the former U.S. representative to the United Nations, is also to be honored. Sudent leaflets had announced a protest against her conservative views. But when her oame is called, only a handful rise and turn their backs. All the others applaud at length. The occasion is too nice for politics.

Time for those receiving their degrees in Library Science to rise. The student body respoods with the tradi-tional "Shhhhhhhhh."

A throng stands to be welcomed into the society of scholars in the arts, literature and sciences. The pleasure on their faces is palpable. It is as if they think they will never have to take another test.

really." Serafima Gorozhankina, a technical horarian who found her library "organized" out of existence, said: "Everybody was afraid. Nobody knew who would be on the list."

The port personnel director, Pyotr G. Sibalo, re-apunting the anxieties of workers raised to think of the disployer — the state — as a lenient parent, said, "In some cases I was close to tears myself."

But in the end, what many feared would be a painful upheaval was almost an anticlimar. For this was a Soviet-style layoff, in which cold-blooded economic sense gave way in the realities of a longstanding "social contract."

Everyone displaced was offered another job, with no loss of benefits. The few workers who complained

Mr. Gorbachev's economists tell him that if he is to lift the Soviet Union to a modern standard of living and make it competitive in the world, the country will have to begin loosening the safety net of low and subsidized prices, job guarantees and cradle-to-grave benefits that stifle initiative.

In principle, Mr. Gorbachev agrees. But he con-tends that people should be rewarded for their work performance and for their initiative, not simply for showing up - and that society should not coddle those who refuse to pull their weight.

But the ruthlessness of the marketplace violates the sense of justice and equality reinforced by 70 years of Soviet rule.

The Soviet people expect, as a matter of hasic right, something most economists believe is impossible; that perestroika should bring them a better life but without risk and without discomfort.

Morflot. Those who do not work for the port itself work for something related — the maritime technical school, the ship repair yard and the electronics plant built to provide jobs for port workers' wives.

Hyichevsk has one of the new cooperative cafes that have sprung up under recent laws permitting private enterprise, and there are several more in nearby Odessa, but "you know what the prices are in those places," enough trouble keeping two growing daughters in

But if life in Byichevsk is not lucurious, it is at least new promises of job security. Profit took a back seat to labor peace. For every ruble the port saved by the cutbacks, it spent four an individual's talent or effort. The necessines of life heavily substanzed and relatively secure, assuming most residents a basic level of comfort with little regard for an individual's talent or effort. The necessities of hie are provided as perquisites accumulated on the job. Their seartment the port come

The couple's basic medical care in the port clinic is free, as are the nursery schools and kindergartens their son and daughter attended. They can ride to work on port buses — transportation throughout the couldry is heavily subsidized — and vacation in port-owned homes or on travel vouchers provided at discount by

One approach is to reorganize the pay system in each workplace so the eager worker is not limited by arbitrary wage norms set by a ministry in Moscow and said Lyudmila Matiyets, a warehouse clerk, who has so that the lazy or otherwise unproductive worker pays a price.

Some workers clearly relish the new opportunities.

Their apartment, two cozy rooms in the port com-plex, takes only 27 rubles of their monthly 350 rubles in combined income, including rent, all utilities, and a The apartment is small, but it is theirs for The apartment is small, but it is theirs for The apartment is small, but it is theirs for The apartment is small, but it is theirs for The apartment is small, but it is theirs for The apartment is small. but it is theirs for The apartment is small. but it is theirs for The apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is small. but it is the complex the apartment is the of housing, job security, medical care and so forth.

During a meeting with port officials, Boris Kondraisky, a young official of the district executive committee, raised an obvious question: How can a worker really learn the value of a ruble when most of his necessities are seen as gifts bestowed by the state?

"True, to a certain extent it spoils people," the port director rephed. "But it's also one of our advantages." By this, he meant the system enabled the port to hold painless, because everyone will get compensatory pay increases, they are skeptical. They already see prices creeping up as a result of a partial deregulation of farmin

Mr. Gorbachev's initial calls last year for "radical price reform" caused a panicky reaction, hoarding and anxious letters to the press, so the Soviet leader agreed that state controls on consumer prices would not be lifted before 1990, despite the advice of his economists that price cootrols hamper other aspects of his eco-nomic program.

Nothing frightens Soviet workers quite so much as the specter of unemployment, and not just because it means being cut off from a reliable source of material benefits. In the Soviet Union, a job is oot only guaranteed by law but is also compulsory, a nation where someone without work is officially labeled a parasite."

Soviet officials insist that unemployment on any significant scale is not an immediate danger.

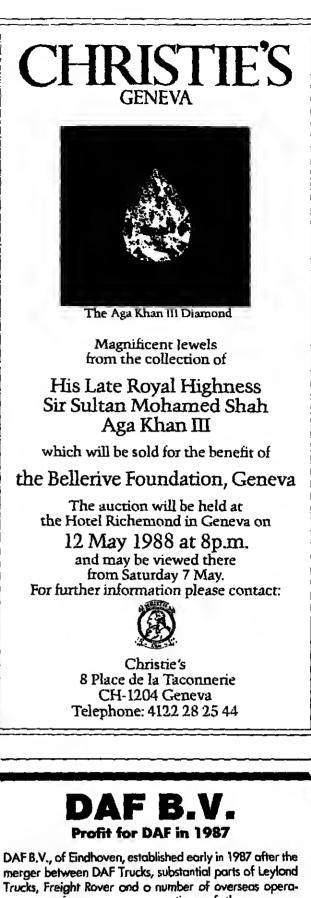

The country has a chronic manpower shortage exaggerated by the vicious cycle of the welfare state: Workers have had little reason to exert themselves because they could not be dismissed. So factories needed extra workers around to make sure the work got done.

Even if the average Soviet worker began to produce at the levels of capitalist industrial nations, the counby has many understilized factories that could be run on two or three shifts, many working women who would be happier to stay home and tend their children and a desperate need for people to provide basic services.

But repairing the Soviet economy will require ma sive dislocations. Soviet economists predict that 16 million people will have to be relocated or retrained by the year 2000, as the country tries to trim the fat from its factory work forces and create a service industry. At Dyichevsk, the layoffs last year entailed a sixmonth process of meetings, job placement, handholding and negotiations.

Port officials prepared the lists of which sections must be cut, and sent them to meetings of the worker collectives at each division of the port, where the workers themselves were told to choose who would go and who would stay.

Some workers say the cuts gave the remaining workers a new attitude loward their jobs, at least for the present. The pay increases, workers say, had much less to do with this than the whiff of expendability.

Rancor Erupts Between Soviet and Bloc Writers at Lisbon Meeting

By Paul Delaney New York Times Service

LISBON -A confrontation between writers from Central and Eastern Europe and others from the Soviet Union startled an international literary conference over the weekend.

The sharp exchanges, in which East Europeans accused the Soviet representatives of being Soviet Union for having liberated Eastern Encondescending and of supporting imperialism, occurred at the Wheatland International Conference.

The debate was touched off by Gyorgy Kon-rad, a Hungarian novelist, when he landed the rope from Nazism, but then contended that Soviet writers now "have to confront yourselves with the role of your country in a part of the world that doesn't want your presence in tanks but as tourists."

The first Soviet writer to respond was Lev Anninsky, a journalist and critic, who said: "Russian tanks came to liberate, so let's look at

One key to the evolution of the San Francisco original-instruments scene is the presence of an involved academic community, above all the widely known musicologist, key-board player and conductor Alan Curtis at the University of Califor-nia in Berkeley. Another is an as-sortment of instrument makers stretching from Santa Cruz to stretching from Santa Cruz to Mendocino, and resident singers and instrumentalists of international renown.

The Bay Area offers a large, well-organized, affluent audience with educated tastes to support not only concerts but also record sales and radio broadcasts. There is the Philharmonia Baroque Orchestta, which may well count as the country's leading early music orchestra and which has inspired the San Francisco Symphony to an onusu-ally active 18th-century program. Beyond that, there is a larger aura of post-hippie, environmen-tally active, bealth-conscious communality that seems linked with at least the core audience for original-instruments performance. This is a connection that today's original instrument performers, with their newly cultivated respectability, ap-proach with extreme warmess. But one source of the initial enthusiasm for gently tinkling harpsichords and softly strumming lutes was their perceived purity and romantic charm, neatly matching the seraphic side of the hippie sensibility. Certainly no one can deny the Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra's hippic roots. The group gave its Taiwan, which already has the largest display hall in Asia, will be opening its own convention center at about the same time as Hong Kong.

Singapore, which launched the 'state-of-the-art' concept, in now considering an even more modern building, while private exhibitors and botels are also constructing their own huge display halls.

Capitalizing on Olympics publicity, Korea is meanwhile working on its own Korea Trade Center, But is all this effort worth the billions of dollars that are being invested? Mel Hosansky, the editor of Successful Meetings Magazine, suggests it should be.

"Asia has really come into the picture over the last five years. The facilities are not yet in line with the best of Europe, but they're certainly getting to that point," he comments.

"You simply can't get better destinations per se than Asian capitals. Once the personnel comes up to par with the facilities, Asia will certainly be the most exciting place."

The price is right, it's accessible, it's exciting." Kuala Lumpur's Putra Convention Center is nobody's favorite - but if the market is there, people will exhibit. China has good facilities, and more flexibility. 'Most important," says Cahner's Kandy Chan, "it has the world's biggest market. Not the richest, but the big-

On July 1, 1989, the new Taipei International Convention Centre (TICC) will open. The largest building project ever undertaken by Taipei, it covers 11,247 square meters, and includes 12 meeting rooms that can house over 6,000 people. The plenary hall accommodates 3,300 people, two auditoriums will seat a further 2,200, and nine meeting rooms will house groups of from 60 to 400 people.

"We also have the most sophisticated audiovisual equipment," said Mr. Luc. "Six-language interpretation, two studios, synchronized slide and videotape systems, even eidophor projectors. In fact, we're the only convention center in Asia with eidophor."

The system, which permits satellite communication from anywhere in the world to the. conference hall, cost over $500,000 to install. Further support facilities include a floor of office space for orga-_ nizers, international telecommunications and even a computerized paging system.

The fourth component of the project is the 1,000-room Hyatt Hotel, due to open in early 1989, about the same time as the TICC. The hotel also has its own conference . hall which can accommodate up to 1,350 people.

For all the promise these developments provide, certain problems remain. The first is location. This is scenic enough, but hardly in the center of Taipei. The Schules, may lit in a

The second problem concents the People's Republic of . China. Up to 10,000 Taiwanese go to PRC each month. The total cash flow from Taiwan to PRC - is up to $1.2 billion a year. Yet it still seems doubtful that PRC would be allowed to exhibit its goods or even attend international conferences in Taiwan. This is a decided liability for the largest conference hall in Asia.

Others question the appeal of Taiwan as a destination. Mr. Luc disagrees. "We are a friendly country, we have a real sense of culture and of course the best museum in Asia. So when international conferences are going to Asia." we feel that we are certainly highly competitive."

With over 600,000 square meters of floor space in the Yondoong area south of the Han river, the KWTC will provide all the facilities necessary for this booming "little tiger" of a country. It is an ambitious venture with major potential.

The exhibition complex alone will have a rotal floor space of almost 200,000 square meters. Three large exhibition and display halls, located in the four-story main building and three-story annex, are the tozin venues for trade fairs. The Pacific and Atlantic Halls are in the main building, and the Atlantic Hall can be partitioned to form the "Olympic Hall."

This wide, pillarless hall will accommodate up th 5,300 people and offer simultaneous translation facilities. The area will be bonded, so that foreign exhibitors can enter and leave without customs clearance.

The Inter-Continental Hotel has meeting rooms, function rooms and a Grand Ballroom scating nearly 2,000. The 600-room hotel will have a disco, fimess center and a 25meter swimming pool. In addition, Mr. Lee explains that up to 20 hotels within a tenminute drive from the center should be operational within the next few years.

The largest building is the 52-floor Trade Tower. This will accommodate the business activities, and will be occupied by trade-related organizations, export associations and about 250 small businesses. The same complex will house a huge shopping center and a city air terminal. As the new airport will be over 100 kilometers from central Seoul, the need for this service is self-evident. While the KWTC, privately owned by the Korea Foreign Trade Association, is obviouslearned English, but few have used it until this year. exciting destination in Asia But those who have visited the country regularly over the past five years note the pervasive style, electricity and, above all, sense of humor and efficiency. "We were once known as the Land of Morning Calm," says Mr. Loe. "And I think visitors will notice that." The calm is hidden under tremendous industry these days, but the market is huge in this prosperous society, and conventioneers could well find Korea - once also known as the Hermit Kingdom - very open and willing to do business.

Singapore: The Price of Success

So when Cahner's needed to build something special they chose Changi as a perfect site and constructed a purpose-built exhibition center with more than 70,000 square meters (753,000 square feet) of show space.

He comments: "It cost $8.15 million, which we split with the Singapore Transport Ministry. By holding the Acrospace Show every two years, we can get our money back. But obviously we want to manage other shows at the site."

In addition, WTC boasts a Convention Center, comptis-

likely to come from Singapore's other impressive convention facilities. The Westin Scamford and Westin Plaza features the world's tallest hotel with a main ballroom for 3,000 people and 25 purposebuilt meeting rooms. The Shangri-la Horel, which Architectural Digest recently described as one of Asia's finest, has a ballroom for 1,400 and nine other conference halls, And, with a capacity of 14,000 and 9,000 permanent sears, Singapore's indoor stadium is also a contender for the exhibition and conference market.

BOUT six months ago, a front-page stoty in the South China Morning Post claimed that the opening of the 409,000 square meter Hong Kong Convention and Exhibition Center (HKCEC) might well be postponed indefinitely. According to this report, Ms. Lydia Dunn, head of the Trade Development Council which owns the site, had suggested that VIPs "delay" their visits until the center was up to scandard.

But Jerry Lowery, general manager of the HKCBC, claims the story was, if not a fabrication, at least misleading. The Center, he said, was right on time. It should open with some in-house industrial exhibits in November. In December there will be an international nursing conference and in 1989 - at about the same time as Taiwan's Convention Center - the HKCECs grand opening.

Indeed, the site on the Hong Kong waterfront in Wanchai gives every appearance of going ahead on time. Rumors still abound as to why the fastidious Ms. Dunn ordered the delay, but officially all systems are go.

MADISON AVENUE

Australian Firm Pitches, And Catches, 2 Accounts

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

New York Times Service EW YORK --- Mojo New York, a recently established outpost of a large Australian ad agency, has won a major account at Reader's Digest even though it was a latecomer to the competition. The account, for international trade advertising, should bring in billings of about $2.1 million a year. Another new account that Julian Martin, Mojo's managing director, announced last week was Pierre Fabre Inc., the American arm of the French pharmaceutical company. Mojo will be promoting its Galenic skin care products and René Furterer hair care products. This account should total $2 million, he said. The new accounts are the fourth and fifth pieces of business for

Revelations was receotly acquired by Pacific Dunlop of Australia, so the agency's first three assignments had Australian connections. The two new accounts, however, are a result of push, not pull. "Persistence is very important," Mr. Martin said. "The world is full of brilliant, lazy people. You just have to work hard and earn your breaks." He added, "This office has been in four creative pitches, and we didn't lose one of them."

Mr. Martin is 30. The co-creative directors who came to the New York outback from Sydney are Rodd Martin (oo kin of Julian), 29, for art, and George Betis, 28, for copy. Mojo New York has 10 people. Six are American. No one is over 40. The agency has the same brash, smart image that the Australian comedian Paul Hogan projects to Australian tourism commercials - which were created by Mojo. ...

Some analysts said the British government may be more open to General Cinema's interest in Cadbury than to takeovers of British companies by the Swiss concerns. It's criticism that it is injecting uncontrolled volatility ioto the market and croding investor confidence.

Brothers Inc., Morgan Stanley & Co., Paine Webber Inc. and Kidder, Peabody & Co. follow the lead of three other Wall Street firms. The suspensions also come amid heated arguments about program trading and its relationship to the protract-ed slump in the stock market since the collapse of prices in October. Salomon, Morgan, PaineWebber and Kidder said they were suspending the technique for their own accounts although they would continue to do it for customers if requested. Clients, rather than the brokerages themselves, are believed to be the biggest users.

Among tovestment banks, Salo-mon and Morgan are some of the most important users of index-arbitrage program trading, which utilizes computers to place stock transactions in New York and trade equivalent stock-index futures on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange to profit from fleeting price disparities. Kidder and PaineWebber are considered to be smaller users of program trading, as is Bear Stearns Cos., another Wall Street firm that said Tuesday that it had suspended use of the controversial trading

The exchange is now requiring its members to furnish daily reports on their program trading in order to analyze the market impact. The NYSE already had been stopping firms from using the ex-change's computer system to place program trades if the Dow Jones industrial average rose or fell more than 50 points.

This constraint was an example of one of the "circuit breaker" techniques that some studies have recommended to reduce violent market swings. Some market participants, however, argue that if such restrictions are not coordinated with limits on stock-index futures trading, the NYSE's action will actually exacerbate volatility.

According to several studies, program trading contributed to the collapse in prices oo Oct. 19, when the Dow dropped a record 508 points. Major institutions tried to protect the value of their portfolios hy selling stock-index futures. Program traders bought the suddenly cheaper futures, and locked to their profit by selling the actual stocks, thus accelerating the cycle. Since then, many tovestors have complained to the NYSE and their brokers that program trading has compelled them to abandon stocks because they believe the market is more risky. Moreover, there is a belief to the "We have no present intention of securities iodustry that lawmakers startiog agaio," said Alan C. will take action to restore investor arner oclated Press K --- Warner Comac. and Lorimar-Telepictures Corp., producer of such ajor television serials as "Dallas," said Tuesday they have agreed in 2.005 6.5944 111,20 principle for Warner to acquire Lorimar in a stock swap valued at 5.0605 28,60 25,15 1283.00 $1.2 billion. Under the agreement, Lorimar, which is heavily in debt, would exchange each of its shares for 0.415 Warner shares. The offer values Lorimar's 47 million outstanding commoo shares at around $14 each, for a total of $650 million. In addition, Warner would assume Lorimar's debt of $550 million.

A merger between the two entertainment companies had been widely expected, since they have been engaged in merger talks since early last month.

Several conditions are attached to the transaction. For example, Lorimar would be able to terminate the agreement if the average price of Warner's common stock during the specified period before the closing of the merger does not result in a price of at least $15 a share for Lorimar shareholders.

In that event, Warner would receive $10 million from Lorimar. Lorimar earlier rejected a $770 million takeover bid, for $17 a share, from Marvin Davis, a Denver investor and the former owner of Twentieth Century Fox Film Corp. Mr. Davis, who has indicated be may be willing to pay more, was not immediately available for comment Tuesday. Analysts have suggested that Lorimar's stock is worth between

$14 and $20 a share. Lorimar stock fell 37.50 cents to $12.75 a share at the close on the American Stock Exchange, while Warner declided 75 ceots to $32.875 on the New York Stock Frchange

Another condition of the deal gives Warner, a New York-based entertainment conglomerate, an option to purchase 18.5 percent of Lorimar common stock at $15 a share. The option can be exercised if Lorimar accepts a higher offer from a third party.

The agreement requires the ap proval of each company's board of directors, Lorimar shareholders and regulatory authorities.

EC Sees Subsidies In Finsider Loans

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches

BRUSSELS — The European Commission on Tuesday warned the Italian government that it considers recent short-term loans to the ailing state-owned steel company, Finsider SpA, to be illegal hidden subsidies aimed at covering operating losses. The warning coincided with proceedings in which the concern was expected to be placed in voluntary liquidation.

voluntary liquidation. Although saddled by a huge debt burden and poor results, Finsider has substantially in-creased its short-term borrowings since 1987, the commission said. In normal circumstances, a company in Finsider's position would be unable to obtain such loans without state gnarantees, it said, noting that most of the lenders are public banks "over which the state has an influence." The commission can order Finsider to reim-burse its debts. If this is refused, the case can be burse its debts. If this is refused, the case can be put to the European Court of Justice, whose decisions EC members are pledged to uphold. The commission also said it has broadened its inquiry into aid granted by the Italian govern-ment to Alfa Romeo SpA. The commission had launched an inquiry in 1986, suspecting that government aid had cov-ered the company's losses and effectively subsi-dized the price paid for Alfa Romeo when it was acquired by Fiat SpA in that year for 1.05 urillion lire ($840 million at current exchange rates). rates).

The commission said it discovered that subsi-dies of 408.9 hillion lire had been given by the government while negotiations were under way to sell the company.

U.S. Clears Extradition In VW Currency Case

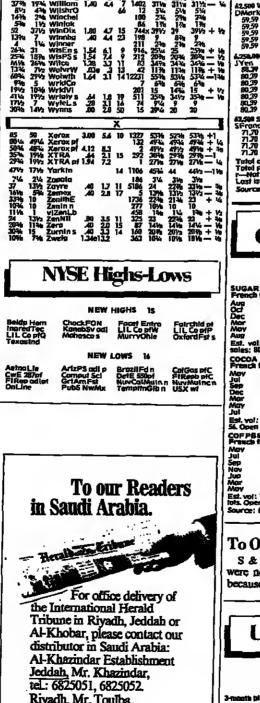

LOS ANGELES - A U.S. court has cleared the way for the extradition of Hans Joachim Schmidt, the West German currency broker accused of conspiring to defraud Volkswagen AG of more than $280 million, lawyers said

Tuesday. The State Department must approve Mr. Schmidt's return to West Germany, but this is considered a formality. the lawyers on both sides of case said.

"We are waiting to see when Mr. Schmidt will be extradited." said a member of the office of Robert Perry, the lawyer who defended Mr. Schmidt in the extradition hearing. "It is a matter of time." On April 19, a federal magistrate ordered the extradition of Mr. Schmidt, who was arrested in a Hollywood apartment in November and charged with forging documents and instigating an embezziement.

The commission said the aid "appears to have been granted with the purpose of reducing the overall indebtedness of the Alfa Romeo group in order to facilitate its sale." (AP, AFP) A week ago the court issued a stay of the fense time to appeal. The stay was lifted on Monday, according to the lawyers.

M&S's Acquisition of Brooks Brothers: Perfect Marriage, or Chalk and Cheese?

By Warren Getler International Herold Tribune

LONDON - Marks & Spencer PLC went to considerable expense last week to convince skep-tics that its $770 million marriage with Brooks

Brothers would result in a happy, healthy family. "The marriage of two retailing traditions," Brit-ain's largest and most profitable retailing chain called it in half-page advertisements in major Brit-ish newspapers. "We look forward to a long and successful future together." Brooks Brothers, it said, was the "oldest and That's precisely the problem, skeptics say. Why should a traditionally mass-market clothing retailer like Marks & Spencer put so much store in a future tied to an exclusive U.S. menswear chain?

The expression used by British analysis to de-scribe the newlyweds is that they are "as different as chalk and cheese." Marks & Spencer, in addition to its core business of affordable clothing, does sell choese — and a cartload of other foods that made up about 35 percent of its fiscal 1987 revenue of £4.2 billion ($7.89 billion). Brooks sticks to wool, tweed and silk, purveying primarily to the East Coast "establishment" crowd.

One of the questions analysts raise is why Marks & Spencer agreed to pay about 30 times Brooks Brothers's fiscal 1988 net income of $24.5 million. Will that premium be justified in the long term? "Ten or 15 years down the line, we wouldn't feel that bad about the deal," said Charles Allen, an analyst with County NatWest Woodmac, the London brokerage. "We don't feel that there's any immediate synergy between the two groups, because Marks & Spencer is a mass market retailer and Brooks is an upscale speciality chain."

On Wednesday, Marks & Spencer will announce its results for the financial year ended March 31, and most analysts predict a 16 percent rise in pretax profit to about £500 million from £432.1 million a year earlier. That would be a slight decline from the 18 percent increase in fiscal 1987, despite an extra week of sales, analysis noted.

Furthermore, many analysis think that the acquisition of Brooks Brothers threatens Marks & Spencer's proud record of a steady pretax carnings growth of nearly 20 percent on average for the past five years. Company executives have said that the takeover will dilute fiscal 1989 earnings by about 2 percent, reflecting financing costs.

Some analysts are worried that Marks increases its risks by going overseas," said Roy J. Macono-chie, retail industry analyst with the London bro-kers James Capel & Co. "But, as I see it, M&S must go overseas over the next 5 to 10 years to achieve 210

At home. Marks & Spencer has seen its dominance in clothing sales croded by such fast-grow-ing specialty retailers as Burton Group PLC and Next PLC. To fend them off, Marks & Spencer is hoping to put Brooks Brothers outlets in some of its main stores in London, expanding later to its other stores in Britain and those in Europe, Mr. Maconochie said "it will take some time for the merits of Brooks to be fully recognized, "The U.K. High Street retail market is very mature and Marks is the biggest player," he said. Marks has learned from 13 very difficult years in Canada that yon must attack a different segment of the North American clothing market. In Canada, they did poorly going into the middle-lower market. But Brooks, with its strong position in the top end of the U.S. market, offers a much better opportunity" for higher profit margins. Other analysis say that Brocks Brothers was starved of cash by its two previous owners, Cam-peau Corp. and Allied Stores Inc. Marks & Spencer, traditionally a strong cash-flow company, should be able to increase Brooks Brothers's sales to about $500 million annually through store ex-pansion and accelerate the U.S. chain's rather agnant profit performance, they said.

Brooks Brothers, which has 47 stores in the United States and 21 outlets in Japan through a joint venture, had sales of $290.1 million in the fiscal year ended January 31.

One significant clause in the takeover terms for Brooks Brothers gives Marks & Spencer a three-year exclusive right to rent space for retailing in Campeau's 62 shopping arcades in the United States and Canada. The Canadian real estate developer and retailing concern agreed to sell Brooks Brothers to help finance its successful bid for Federated Department Stores Inc.

Another clause is a five-year noncompetition agreement between Campeau and Marks & Spen-cer. And, Marks & Spencer has the right to open food outlets in Campeau's department stores. These clauses are valued by Marks & Spencer at $80 million, reducing the nominal purchase price for Brooks Brothers to $670 million. Mr. Maconochie said that Campean's offer to rent space in its shopping malls is a crucial part of Marks & Spencer's expansion plans, after a failure in secure good mall space in Canada undermined efforts in that country.

General Cinema has said it may bid for Cadbury with partners. Analysts have speculated that it might join with Suchard or sell its holdings to the Swiss company, which would then sell its Rowntree stake. The analysis said General Cine-ma could end up owning Cadbury's beverages operations, leaving Su-chard with the candy business. Some analysts, however, cited other scenarios. One is that General Cinema would sell its stake in Cadbury to another U.S. company, such as RJR Nabisco Inc. or Philip Morris Cos., which would then make a takeover bid.

Analysts noted that Cadbury is a larger company than Rowntree and said it would thus require a bid of Shout £3 billion to acquire it. (Reuters, AFP)

U.S. Paychecks: A Changing Balance Even as Unemployment Falls, Wages Are Barely Rising

By Louis Uchitelle New York Times Service

NEW YORK - In years past, an announcement that the U.S. civilian unemployment rate had fallen to 5.4 percent would have signaled the coming of big wage increases, sparked by growing competition among employers for a dwindling supply of workers. But elearly times have changed: despite some shortages, wages are barely rising and there are oo signs that

Treasury Aides Support Book That Tells of Early G-5 Pact By Hobart Rowen

ngton Post Service

WASHINGTON - U.S. Treasury officials have confirmed, in a general way, previously confidential details contained in a new book by a Japanese journalist about the monetary coordination launched by major industrial countries in 1985, including a revelation that the initial accord had been outlined a week before the Sept. 22 meeting in New York's Plaza Hotel

"Managing the Dollar: From the Plaza to the Louvre," by Yoichi Funabashi, says the Group of Five nations succeeded in driving the dollar down with less than half the intervention moncy - $18 billion - committed at the Plaza.

The book by Mr. Funabashi, deputy ecooomics editor of the Japanese newspaper Asahi Shimbun, is based on interviews with virtually all of the principals.

A Treasury official said the book "is both occurate and inaccurate." But its credibility was bolstered by the presence at a conference of David C. Mulford, assistant Treasury secretary, and Richard Darman, former deputy Treasury secretary, both of whom it extensively quotes or

Mr. Darman led a discussion in which he praised the book as "a first-rate piece of work which is" - with a smile - "often accurate." The book's central revelation is that a secret meeting of G-5 deputies in London a week before the Plaza session produced what is described as a "oon-paper," which cootained the agreement that the dollar's value had climbed too high and needed to be pushed down.

The book said the document included an understanding secretly agreed to at the Plaza. The dollar was to be pushed down 10 to 12 percent within six weeks by coordinated market mtervention, The United States and Japan each agreed to take 30 percent of the intervention burden, West Germany committed to 25 percent, France to 10 percent, and Britain to 5 percent. A Treasury official did not deny the existence of the con-paper, but indicated there were multiple versions of the preparatory work.

The book said that when six of the seven nations (Italy did oot participate until later) agreed at the Louvre in February 1987 to stabilize exchange rates, they set "target zones" of 2.5 percent to 5 percent above or below dollar rates of 153.50 yen and 1.8250 marks. fighting. Now, in a definitive scholarly biography. Now, in a demnive scholarly biography. Michael T. Isenberg uncovers the roots of the Sullivan myths that help mark the break be-tween the United States's rural past and its modern urban culture.

Isenberg, an assistant professor of history at the U.S. Naval Academy, begins with a series of thoughtful essays on three crucial forces that shaped Sullivan and his era. The first was introduction. Sullivan was born in Boston in 1858 and grew up there. As America's cities bulged with immigrants from the countryside and abroad, they created new variations on the old American theme of opportunity.

In the cities, opportunity was the chance to earn some measure of independence and distinction from an ever-larger crowd, with a predictable emphasis on materialism as the lowest common denominator of distinction. A second formative influence on Sullivan and his era was the great Irish emigration to the United States in the mid-1800s. Sullivan's parents were both part of that human flood. Sullivan's father, like the vast majority of his country-men, crossed the Atlantic with little money or education, and worked as an unskilled laborer all his life.

With that background, and without a strong inclination toward schoolwork, Sullivan began his working life as an apprentice to a plumber, his working hie as an apprender to a plumber, then to a tinsmith. There were few other oppor-tunities available to him, because the larger American society reacted to the Irish immigra-tion with a wall of prejudice. The third crucial influence was what isenberg describes as a late-19th-century "cilt of masculinity," preva-lent in American society but especially perva-lent in American culture. The trind sersive in Irish-American culture. The rigid sex roles of the day left women to tend the hearth

Isenberg successfully analyzes Sullivan's personality and public image in terms of these trends. Sullivan was a child of the city faced with an adult life as a laborer. A large mangifted with extraordinary strength and agility pro baseball player, then as a boxer.

His talents and larger-than-life personality won him considerable fame, and he made a fortune by the standards of the day on exhibition tours. Small wonder that John L. Sullivan is now part of American mythology.

A CONTRACTOR Her decision appeared to climinate two shadows hanging over September's Summer Olympics in Seoul, one involving a threatened boycott and the other the possible barring of the entire British track team. Bodd, 21, said she was quitting because of "nervous exhaustion." The Times of London quoted Dr. Ken Kingsbury, who was called in Saturday by her family, as saying: "She is a pitiful sight. Bouts of crying and deep depression - all the clinical signs of anxiety." Budd said she plans to stay with her mother in Bloemfontein, south of Johannesburg, "until I am healthy again. I made a decision to take a rest ----I am just here to recover. I'm very disappointed. ... [The reason] is obvious, isn't it? My spirit has been broken." She said she had "decided to give up running for one year," but declined to say whether she would return to Britain, under whose flag she had hoped to compete in September. "I can't decide that now," she said. Reaction from the anti-

a series and the series of the apartheid lobby was quick. "Her return to South Africa now literally vindicates our position that she is a South African," Sam Ramsamy, head of the South African Non-Racial Olympic Committee, said in London. "It shows she merely used her British passport as a flag of convenience." Budd took British citizenship four years ago on the basis of her grandfather's being born in Britain. That enabled her to sidestep a ban on competing in international meets, from which South Africans are barred because of their country's apartheid policies.

In a statement released in London Monday night, Budd said she was not well enough to go on battling allegations by the International Amateur Athletics Federation that she had participated at a track meet in South Africa last June. The LAAF has said Budd violated the spirit of the anti-apartheid movement, although she did-not compete. Budd has denied breaking any rules. Black African nations had threatened to boycott the Seoul Games unless Budd was punished, and the LAAF had demanded that the British Amateur Athletics Board suspend her from international events for a year. The LAAF threatened to act against the board if it didn't, possibly suspending the BAAB itself. That would have effectively eliminated Britain from international track.

When she arrived in Britain in 1984, Budd was an established runner, having set 12 world ju-nior bests between 1982-84. But protesters soon began appearing at meets where she competed, shouting abuse and holding banners bearing such slogans as oot be the first against Wimbledon. and Wimbledon will, before parad-ing opposing brands of soccer to the world. In 116 years of FA Cup history there has been nothing as Young. Another photo revealed improbable as this final. Fashanu — "Fash the Bash" — Fashanu — "Fash the Bash" — cracking a Tottenham player's jaw Liverpool, Englisb league cham-pion for a record 17th time, tranwith an elbow last year. Even Wimbledon manager Bobby Gould, who inherited the team when Dave Bassett quit last summer, admits: "No one played more aggressively or competitively than me. But I knew the limits. The players here were never taught professional etnics."

This season five men - Vinny Jones, Lawrie Sanchez, Brian Gayle, Eric Young and Carlton Fairweath er — have been sent off and 53 bookings have been amassed. Noth-Wimbledon cannot afford an arm or a leg of a John Barnes, the Liverpool Jamaican whose more classical application of strength and grace is without peer.

Of course Wimbledoo cannot compete skill-for-skill. It pays an average of less than a third of Barnes's £100,000 salary, its players have smaller houses, less expensive cars and inferior talents.

What they have is a spirit that wrings victory out of defeat. They play at their best when a goal, or a man, down. They chase, hunger thriving on rejection, with the finesse of hounds after the hare.

"People don't like our power play," says Gould. "We are going to continue stuffing it down their throats."

Perish the thought of Vince Jones given license to "stuff" anyone. Jones embodies Wimbledon. He was taken off a building site 18 months ago and mugs rather than tackles. He boasted in a tabloid last year of threatening to tear an ear off Liverpool's Kenny Dalglish "and spit in the hole."

More recently, reaching parts others rarely do, he was photographed grabbing an opponent from behind in the groin.

Gould and aide Don Howe, England's assistant manager, feel they can "harness Vinny's love for the game and cut out the silly bits."

We hope for soccer's sake that Liverpool (whose disciplinary re-cord is the best in Britain) teaches Wimbledon a lesson in style and behavior. Otherwise, Wimbledon will become the role model, its "power play" mimicked. Given the English cup's grip oo television audiences, soccer would the take another brutal twist.

OBSERVER Why Wait? Write Today

By Russell Baker N FOR A DESIGNATION OF a book. Only probably you don't write it. "But you don't have to write it," says the publishing man. That's a relief, because when is the last time you wrote anything at all, even a letter to your mother? And remember what she wrote back?

"Dear Sou: I fear life so close to the seat of power is making you lose all power of self-expression. Or were you always illiterate? Come to think of it, I don't remember ever seeing you read a book even when you were in college."

That settled matters between you and dear old Mother. "At this point in time" (you were dictating to your secretary) "I am too committed to the ideation, implementation and execution of seminal work in the public-service area to master wordmanipulation skills essential to the formulation of written communication, maternal-wise, to a degree that might indicate a high literacy component in my -"

Whereupon, mercifully, as you knew she would if you kept emitting typical federal noises long enough, the secretary said, "I get your drift and will frame a letter to your mother right away." "Start it with 'Dear Mama,"" you surely said, being hopeful that historians would someday read your secretary's writings for clues to the true you. Secretary: "Do you really want history to believe you called your mother 'Mama' even after you had risen so close to the seat of power and been hailed in the Evans-Novak column as 'hrilliant and hardnosed"?"

Yes, admit it. You wanted to deceive history, show it you were not all hard-nosed, prove you could still say "mama."

But all that was way back then when the world trembled at your frown, and now it is book time. Never thought you'd write a book, did you?

"No need to," you told clamorous publishers, agents, lawyers, accountants, greedy children and wives whining that it was swell for you, Mr. Ex-White House Big Shot, pulling down a million per annum from International Consolidated Dynamic & Son, hut if you really loved your family you'd take the book publisher's million and buy them a nice little wine cellar.

Anyhow, who writes? Saps. right? Herman Melville. Never sold enough to buy himself a desk copier, much less a little place in a Hampton. And no wonder. "Moby L themselves as an honest lot, and, for the most part, the self-trust is not misplaced. Their low Dick."
